

Think of our world as it looks from that rocket that's heading towards Mars. It is like a child's globe, hanging in space, the continents stuck to its side like coloured maps. We are fellow passengers on a dot of earth.

Lyndon B. Johnson (1908-1973)

Thirty-Sixth President of the United States (1963–1969)

